Activity 1: "Storytime with Peter and Ananias"

Instructions:
1. Gather the children in a circle for a storytelling session.
2. Read a simplified version of Acts 5, focusing on the story of Ananias and Peter.
3. Use props or felt board figures to display the story as you tell it.

Roles:
- Storyteller: The teacher or volunteer reads and animates the story.
- Listeners: The children sit in a circle and listen attentively.

Discussion Prompts:
- "What do you think Peter was feeling when Ananias lied?"
- "Why is it important to tell the truth?"
- "How can we be honest with our friends?"

Participation:
- After the story, each child can share a time when they told the truth and why it was important.

Activity 2: "Truth Time Role-Play"

Instructions:
1. Divide children into small groups.
2. Present a few scenarios where characters have to decide whether to tell the truth or a lie.
3. Have each group act out one scenario.

Roles:
- Actors: Children take turns playing different characters from the scenarios.
- Audience: The rest of the group watches and gives feedback.

Discussion Prompts:
- "What could happen if someone chooses to lie?"
- "How might telling the truth help us feel inside?"
- "What did you think of the character's choice?"

Participation:
- After each role-play, each child shares one reason why they think being honest is important.

Activity 3: "Crafting Honesty"

Instructions:
1. Provide each child with a simple outline of a heart on paper.
2. Have children draw or color things that represent being honest and truthful inside the heart.

Roles:
- Artists: Each child creates their own artwork.
- Helpers: A volunteer helps distribute materials and provide guidance.

Discussion Prompts:
- "What pictures did you draw to show honesty?"
- "How can we practice honesty with our family or friends?"
- "What’s something you think would make God happy?"

Participation:
- Children each present their artwork and explain what they drew, relating it to being truthful.
